Deep Oil Well in Earth's Crust Might Create a Volcano.

Our valued friend Editor Brice of the News-Banner seems to be worried over the possible out-come of drilling holes in his county in search of oil, and prints the following in his paper:

John R. Williams, champion deephole ligger of the world, who is now in remain arranging to put down a deep set at some point in the oil fields, believes it is possible to dig a hole so

It is possible to dig a hole so that a virtual volcano might be the despest hole in the world. It situated in Harrison County, W. Va., and was abandoned at a depth of 7,-100 feet. Before putting down that cell he drilled a hole in Washington county, Pa., to a depth of more than 1000 feet.

The principal thing learned by Mr. Williams is his deep well explorations is that the further down the hole goes the hotter it gets. It would be possible to reach a point of something like two miles beneath the earth's surface where it would be hot enough to melt the metal of the drill. It is hot enough to boil water at a depth of 8000 feet, Mr. Williams said. At the depth of 7.286 feet the thermometer, which was let down to the bottom of the hole, recorded a temperature of 196 degrees Fahrenheit.

The interior of the earth is a molten mass—there is no doubt about it in Mr. William's opinion. Just what should happen if this seething furnace should be tapped he does not venture to predict, but he thinks it might cause a signatic volcanic eruption.

No scientific discoveries of much consequences were made by drilling these deep holes, according to Mr. Williams. Different results might be obtained in Texas, he thinks.

BURNED TO DEATH

Miss Belle Wilson, age 80, met a tragic death Saturday evening at Union City, when her clothing caught fre from an open grate. The sad accident occurred at the home of Wright Fhebus. Miss Wilson's plight was first known when she rushed out of the living room into a hall, her clothing a mass of flame from her feet to her head. Members of the family went to her rescue—but too late. She was burned about 4:30 and died about 11 o'clock that night, after intense suffering.

The remains were brought to Hickman Sunday and interred at the City Cemetery, after funeral services by Eld. E. L. Miley, of the Christian church.

Hickman was really Miss Wilson's home, although of late years she had divided the time between relatives here and at the city. She was a sister of the late Ben Wilson; also an aunt of Mealames Chas. Isbell and Dee Harper and Sam A. Wilson. Deceased was born and reared in this immediate section, being one of our oldest and most highly respected citisens. She was a devout and active member of the Christian church. Her tragic death will be a source of sorrow to her many friends and a wide circle of acquaintances.
